Is better than any soap handier, finer, more effective, more of it, more for the money, and in the form of a powder, for your convenience. Takes, as it were, the fabric in one hand, the dirt in the other, and lays them apart—comparatively speaking, washing with little work.

As it saves the worst of the work so it saves the worst of the wear. It isn't the use of clothes that makes them old before their time, it is rubbing and straining getting the dirt out by main strength.

For scrubbing, house-cleaning, washing dishes, windows and glassware, Pearline has no equal.

Beware of imitations, some peddlers and grocers will tell you this is "as good as" or "the same as" Pearline. IT IS NOT. Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline which is said to be "as good" or "the same," be honest—send it back. 565 JAMES PYLE, New York.

STATE NEWS.

Androscoggin.

At the inquest on the body of the murdered John Lahey, at Lewiston, Thursday Michael McGillicuddy testified that his father quarrelled with Lahey, last Saturday night, and stabbed he latter to the heart. Michael's story was corroborated by his wife, Mrs Delorie L, a French woman, Mrs. Kelly and Miss Maloney who from their window witnessed the crime. The jury will probably find a verdict against the old man and he will be committed to await the September term of court.

Thursday night, John, son of C. W. Roak, of Auburn, while bathing in the Androscoggin lost his footing and being unable to swim some boys went to him, but not being strong enough to help him he was drowned.

Deacon E. Wright, for many years secretary of the Androscoggin County Agricultural Society, died at Lewiston, Thursday, aged seventy four.

Thomas Marshall and Luke Merriman, prisoners in Androscoggin jail, escaped Wednesday night, by sawing off a bar in the window and letting themselves down by a rope of blankets.

Michael Burnside, an employe at the Otis Falls pulp mill, stepped from a raised platform, Tuesday night, and fell fifteen feet, striking on his back. It is feared his spine is seriously injured, as at last accounts he was unable to move.

Aroostook.

There has never been any better hay weather in Aroostook and the farmers say that the hay secured is of the very best quality—in fact, the best they ever saw.

Not long since a large number of Caribou people went to Portage Lake on a fishing expedition. Among the number were P. Collins, of Pennsylvania, who had the misfortune to lose his pocket-book, containing about $20 in cash and $5,000 in notes. He was unable to find it and offered a reward for its recovery. Mr Collins was obliged to leave for home last Wednesday, and the day after his departure, Mr Sledgell, of Portage Lake, brought the book, with contents intact, to Mr Collins' brother, and was presented with a $20 bill and the money in the pocket-book, making $40 in all.

One day last week, as A. H. Parker, his wife and Miss Mattie Knowles, of Masardis, were crossing a bridge in a covered carriage, the horse commenced to back. The carriage, containing the horse all went off the bridge, falling about ten feet, the horse turning a complete somersault. Strange to state, with the exception of Miss Knowles receiving a sprained shoulder, the inmates of the carriage received only a severe shaking up. Mr Parker was hurt some in getting the horse out. The horse was not injured in the least and the carriage but slightly damaged. It was a narrow escape.

Cumberland.

The travel in the Union Railway station, Portland, was enormous Wednesday. Over eighty cars of the Boston & Maine, used for excursionists, besides all the regular cars of the different roads crowded the station.

Edward Percival, of Portland, a brakeman on the Portland & Ogdensburg, fell between two box cars Wednesday, above Bartlett, N. H., and was badly injured. He was brought to Portland on the next train and taken to the Maine General Hospital where it was found necessary to amputate his leg. He is about twenty three years old, and unmarried.

The steamer Eleanora, of the New York line, left Portland, Wednesday night, at six o'clock for New York. At 10.30, off Boon Island, she ran into the schooner Portland, sixty-five tons, of Annapolis, N. S., bound for Annapolis from Boston with five hundred and fifty barrels of flour and meal. The pilot on the steamer saw no lights and the first known of the schooner was seeing her sails under her bows. The schooner was struck amid ships and cut almost in two, both topmasts carried away and sails torn. Her crew of six men were taken off by the steamer without harm. The steamer was towed back to Portland. The steamer was not damaged.

The Ellsworth Marine Railway Company has been organized with a capital of $5,000 divided into shares of $25 each. Its officers are as follows: President, I. M. Grant; secretary and treasurer, J. A. McGown; directors, I. M. Grant, J. M. Higgins, Abram Lord and James Lord. They have purchased the machinery of the Dyer Marine Railway at Belfast, and Mr. Dyer is to be a stockholder in the new company. The new railway is expected to be in operation by September. The Ellsworth Marine Railway is to be located at I. M. Grant's shipyard, and will have a capacity for vessels of two hundred and fifty tons.

Somerset.

For some time past experiments have been going on at the Bath electric light station, for the purpose of finding out the practicability of burning sawdust in the furnaces there, and the experiments proved so satisfactory that this form of fuel will be used as the station hereafter. The way this is supplied by Mann's mill through a large pipe of galvanized iron, one foot in diameter, which is run from the saw pit to the station. A powerful artificial draught is established through the conductor and the dust is blown from one building to the other. The benefit derived from this new departure will be two-fold. It will enable the station to secure an abundance of cheap fuel, and will relieve the mill of the annoyance of piling up sawdust which has accumulated to a large extent during the past few years.

A flag bearing the names of Harrison, Morton, Burleigh and Milliken, was raised on Custom House Square, Belfast, Thursday, after which a parade was held at the Opera House, presided over by Jos. Wm. C. Marshall and addressed by Hon. Herbert M. Heath, of Augusta.

Mr John Robbins, at the Phoenix House, Belfast, discovered smoke issuing from the upper stories of the building Monday night, and found fire in a room of a guest. The man was asleep and nearly suffocated with smoke. The fire was extinguished without a general alarm. The guest had doubtless set fire to his room by the careless use of matches, or was smoking in bed.

A man in Ward five, Belfast, went courting one evening recently. The neighbors in the vicinity objected and when the man emerged from the house a party in waiting pelted him with rotten eggs. The crowd were having lots of fun until the woman of the house appeared with a drawn knife which she flourished dangerously near the party. One must barely escaped the knife.

We have before mentioned, says the Belfast Journal, the remarkable success of Mr John H Quimby, of this city in refunding the $150,000 six per cent municipal bonds of the Bangor & Moosehead Lake Railroad Company. At the annual meeting of the corporation in July, Mr Quimby reported that he had refunded $148,000 of the amount. Since then the remaining $2,000 have been called in and the money is now in hand. The vote to refund was passed on the 3d day of February, and in less than six months from that time every dollar was refunded. When the mortgage was made in 1870, the trustees were Ex Gov Crosby and Judge Dickerson, of Belfast, and Hon A. W. Paine of Bangor. The latter is now the only living trustee. Monday, Mr. Quimby made up the completed record and sent it to Bangor for Mr Paine to discharge the mortgage, and the same day the refunded bonds $150,000, were destroyed at the Savings Bank, Hon. Joseph Williamson representing Mr Paine and Mr Quimby the Bangor & Moosehead Lake Railroad Company. There were one hundred and nineteen one thousand dollar bonds, and sixty two five hundred dollar bonds. Each bond was placed upon the fire separately and consumed to ashes. Thus ends the question of refunding the mortgage bonds which has agitated the people of Belfast for several years.

Short Cuts.

Continued wet weather in England has nearly ruined the hay crop.

The population of Rome grows at the rate of 18,000 to 20,000 a year. At the close of 1887 it was 382,978.

In London, dressmakers and others are fined heavily for requiring their girls to work over hours in the slack.

In Chili the paper money is so depreciated that hotel charges are about $600 a day and boot blacks get $10 for a shine.

The cremationists of London are about to erect a chapel at an expense of $25,000 in connection with their crematorium at Woking.

Fourteen thousand bathers sported in the waves at Coney Island, upon one warm day this week. Other beaches were enjoyed proportionately.

Mormons are flocking into Wyoming in great numbers, and it is said that two years hence they will control the local elections in the Western section.

If the big raft now floating toward New York were to be stood on end it would be about as high as three Bunker Hill monuments, one on the top of the other.

A Georgia editor makes the announcement: "We do not want any more watermelons at this office. We are not a railroad company, and enough is enough."

More than fifty of the best known ladies of Battle Creek, Mich., have formed a dress reform club and declared themselves against bustles, high heels, tight shoes, stiff corsets, etc.

The weather in the Alps has been so bad this season that the hotel keepers look in vain with dismal faces for the usual stream of foreign guests. A continuous rain has been a calamity to the region.

The Leavenworth Times says the corn is so tall in Kansas that strangers passing through on night trains, looking out on the cornfields by moonlight, talk of the dense oak and maple forests they are passing through.

The British Consul at Hankow, says that China, though still spoken of as a country of stagnation and stereotyped ideas, is really only a little behind its pushing neighbor Japan in its haste to get rid of ancient prejudices.

American tourists travel in Europe this summer more economically than usual, probably because they have learned to travel like the natives. By following native customs, choosing hotels most frequented by the natives, and by other devices, Americans are not made subject to foreign imposition and find traveling less expensive than they have been led to suppose.

Hunting for turtles eggs on the islands of the coast is a summer pastime of Georgians. It is said that one of the curiosities of a turtle's nest is that no one, having taken the eggs from a turtle's nest, can get them all back in again. Several have tried the experiment to find it a blank failure. After filling the cavity in the sand there are always eggs enough left to fill a couple more nests just as large. Old Mrs Turtle, when she deposits an egg, peddles it in tight with her feet, egg by egg, the elasticity of the egg shell permitting it, but man cannot compress the eggs as does the turtle.

The Herald, of Palatka, Fla., relates that while four boys were bathing at Hart's Point, an alligator seized the foot of one of them and proceeded to drag him into deep water. Another of the lads named John Dodds bravely struck out and dove under the water, coming up to within two feet of the struggling boy, when he jumped on the back of the gaping and stuck both fingers in its eyes, whereupon the alligator let the boy's foot loose. In the meantime the other two boys had reached shore. John, who still had the alligator under his control by blinding it, then got a person to lead the saurian to the shore, which was subsequently done. The creature was then shot by two hunters. The boy who was bitten was not badly hurt.

The Pall Mall Gazette mentions the health gained from patents on children's toys. "On the camp stores is due the passion they exhibit for a box and an elastic band. AT OCEAN PARK.

Thursday was musical day at Ocean Park. There were the usual devotional services and vocalism of the Normal classes held in the forenoon. Mrs J. F. Phillips, missionary from India, had charge of the classes. Rain prevented a great attendance at the matinee, but in the evening a large gathering assembled at the concert in the temple.

The Fashions

[From the New York Evening Post.]

Judging by the many very elegant toilets sent over from London and Paris watered ribbon is used to excess as a garniture for dresses, hats, wraps, and bonnets on costly ladies' gowns of very soft white wool and upon delicate or diaphanous fabrics for dancing and other evening entertainments, ribbons of the most beautiful dyes and of lovely half tints of pearl, pink, gold color, whiteness, golden green, the rose apricot, and the like are used with bewitching effect. Many ribbons of rather narrow width in very open weave, arranged on the skirt, tunic and bodice in draperies now are taking the place of lace as a finish on silhouettes of tulle and shot or pailletted net and satin.

Among travelling dress fabrics are those of black mohair in handsome shades of golden tan olive drab gray terra cotta and bronze brown. These are made up with striped silk or with many rows of narrow bows on the skirt, or in angle wide rows as a border. There is a Directoire jacket of the mohair with sleeves wide opening over an ample waistcoat of the goods. A new cloak of the same, reaching to the skirt hem and tied with many ribbons is usually added.

A specimen of French house toilet is as follows: Dress is an Empire redingote that fits like a glove and has all its edges bordered with gold passementerie. It is cut away at the side but there it laps in a double breasted fashion and is fastened far down the length of one flank and a half with large gold buttons. This redingote opens over a skirt of Pompadour silk of the ground damity in tint, the flowers in their natural colors, against a background of pale gold leaves. The sleeves are long and are slashed from top to bottom leaving the arm exposed, which is partly veiled with lace. The high silk collar is cut down in front and has a lace ruff inside. There are both spaniels and Venetian fichus as his collar. Sometimes the front is laced by end of buttoned and at the top of the sleeve is a puff of the Pompadour silk. American dressmakers have copied the toilet in artistic gowns for five o'clock teas and luncheon parties.

The pound bodied waists continue in high favor and are made in various ways. The simplest and most popular form being the regular old-fashioned model about to be found in portraits of our grandmothers with several rows of close fine shirring both front and back where it is attached to the belt. Many fabrics arranged in this style are made up without linings. The waist in this more easily and perfectly fitted and is worn over a low cut bodice or drawers. The models generally prefer having a lining of batiste or silk myself with it seems to strengthen them but this does not fit very well with wash dresses, as the two different materials will not shrink in the same proportion after being laundried. Another full waist very much used by those with slight figures has the top shirred or smocked from the neck low down on the chest to represent a pointed or rounding yoke. The lines of gathering are three-fourths of an inch apart, and ribbed around the back and shoulders. The sleeves are smocked to correspond, and in many cases there is a pointed girdle to match and many rows of shirring on the sides of the dress skirt.

William Davidge Dead

THE VETERAN ACTOR DIES SUDDENLY WHILE JOURNEYING TO SAN FRANCISCO.

A dispatch Tuesday announced that William Davidge of the Madison Square Theatre Company died on the train at Cheyenne, Wy T., while on his trip to California. The stock company of the Madison Square Theatre left New York Friday night, bound for the Pacific coast. The journey as far as Cheyenne was made without any incident of a startling nature. No particulars have been received, but it is presumed Mr Davidge's death was the result of rheumatism of the heart. He was feeling far from well when he left New York, and at times suffered terribly from rheumatic twinges.

Mr Davidge never appeared as a star, but for the last twenty five years he has assumed leading roles in the best of these dramatic companies. He was respected and esteemed by members of his profession and his death will cause grief in many households where he was beloved. He was born in England and at the time of his death was in his 72nd year. He early showed a fondness for the drama and, as soon as opportunity allowed, he joined an amateur association and made his first appearance in private before the footlights as "James in "The Miller's Maid." His first public appearance was at Nottingham, in 1836, when with a travelling company he played "Adam Winterton" in "The Iron Chest."

Mr Davidge's first appearance in America was at the Old Broadway Theatre August 10, 1850, when he played "Sir Peter Teazle." He has since that time appeared in all the leading stock companies of the city, almost invariably appearing in "first old men" roles. Mr Davidge has also played in stock companies at many provincial cities before the combination system put an end to such organizations. Few actors have appeared before more audiences and with celebrities of the profession than has Mr Davidge. In '61 he was a stock actor at the Winter Garden and Shakespeare died every role allotted him, when Edwin Booth, Charlotte Cushman and Rapsey Williams ranked among the stars. It was a notable stock company at the Winter Garden that season, and among his associates were C. W. Coulcock, J. H. Stoddart, Charles B. Thorne, Owen Marlowe, Mat Lingham, Ada Clifton and Mrs John Sefton. The season of 1861-1862 he was at Wallack's, corner of Broadway and Thirteenth Street. A year later Mr Davidge was found at the old Olympic Theatre with Mrs John Wood. Under Joan Brougham's management he played again at the Winter Garden and was a member of the stock company there during the last season of that theater's existence. The season of 1867-68 found him once more at the old Broadway Theatre, where he made a successful hit as "Old Eccles" in "Caste." He joined Augustin Daly's company in 1869 and for several years assumed important roles in the popular plays of what were then the Fifth Avenue Theatre. Among his associates at that time were E. L. Davenport, J. B. Polk, George Clarke, George Holland, James Lewis, George Jordan, Agnes Ethel, Mrs. Gilbert, Fanny Davenport, Amy Ames and D. H. Harkins. A few and those adult children survive him. He leaves, besides a daughter, five sons. One is a successful theatre in Philadelphia. The other is William Davidge, Jr., who is highly esteemed as a [illegible]

Something for the Workingmen to Remember.

It would be hardly possible to put the free trade case more clearly or more strongly. The arguments which President Cleveland uses are those which Mr. Cobden used to employ forty-five years ago, and which any English free trader would employ now. They are purely free trade arguments, and as such we are very glad to see Mr Cleveland using them, though sorry for the popular infatuation which makes it dangerous to give them their right name.—London Times.

He discusses the principles at issue in the struggle and shows that he is a free trade candidate in everything but name. The reservation is an important one for American party purposes. The President feels compelled to characterize the attempt to brand him a free trader as a deception of his enemies. For all that, the electoral conflict now in progress is a conflict between free trade and protection, and nothing less.—London News.

The only time England can use a Celt is when he emigrates to America and votes for free trade.—London Times.

Attention Lumbermen!

The lumbermen of the State of Maine are not alone in their OPPOSITION TO FREE MANUFACTURED LUMBER, *as there is a strong opposition from Missouri, Kentucky, West Virginia and all the Pacific States to the placing of lumber on the free list. The high duty now collected by the Dominion of Canada upon nearly all the articles manufactured is found sufficient to prevent such action by Congress. * * * Free lumber from Canada without equal advantages in return would be a* WHOLLY GRATUITOUS INJUSTICE TO OUR OWN PEOPLE. * * * The Canadian lumberman purchases his supplies and teams at a less cost than do our lumbermen and he PAYS LESS FOR LABOR.—Bangor Commercial, February, 1888.

Free Trade Campaign Literature.

The Democrats are just now distributing considerable campaign literature, among the sheets thrown about town being the President's message and the speeches of Messrs. Carlisle and Mills in the House of Representatives. All of these gentlemen are free traders. The message of the President is hailed by the British press as embodying the genuine Cobdenf free trade doctrine, and if any intelligent workingman will read the speeches of either Mr. Carlisle or Mr. Mills he will fail to find a single word that is not hostile to the American system of protection. Says Mr. Mills, "If the tariff imposed a revenue duty sufficient to obtain money enough to support the Government, but not high enough to impede importation then our foreign trade would grow rapidly." That is to say strike down the barrier that to-day prevents England from flooding our market with the surplus product of her pauper labor and give English manufacturers an opportunity to compete with our own manufacturers and the result would be to increase our prosperity. This is as emphatically shown on the face of it that the only wonder is that a man could be allowed to get up in the halls of Congress and talk such nonsense. In just

The Fishery Treaty.

In his speech on the fishery treaty Senator Sherman took occasion to define the Retaliatory Act passed by Congress to enable the Administration to successfully and fairly meet the question. Senator Sherman said:

If the treaty was rejected the matter would stand as it did in 1885, under the the treaty of 1818. And only the President of the United States would, with moderation, exercise the powers conferred upon him by the law authorizing retaliation there would be no trouble. Whenever Great Britain or any of her dependencies excluded American fishermen from their rights of hospitality in their ports the President should do the like with Canadian fishermen in American ports.

If the Canadians would not sell coal to American fishermen the same course should be pursued toward Canadian fishermen. If this were done, quietly, modestly and earnestly, there would not be much longer any trouble in the matter. The quickest sense of mankind would be that the United States had the right to measure out to Canada the same hospitality that is received.

Nothing could be fairer than this proposition, which simply says that Canadian vessels shall enjoy just such privileges in our ports as the Canadian Government is willing to extend to our vessels in the Dominion ports. Candidate Putnam attempts to divert attention by a great mass of technical phrases, but the fishermen simply ask the common privileges of hospitality freely accorded Canadian vessels in our ports, which is exactly the position of the Republicans, and they are not to be deceived by all this extraneous talk. As a Democratic fisherman remarked after Mr Putnam's speech in Hancock County, "We know what we want and if he thinks he can fool us he is mistaken."

What the People Thought About It.

The Democratic county ticket is much stronger as a whole than that nominated by the Republicans.—Commercial

The opinion of our contemporary on this point is of very slight importance. It said very much the same thing two years ago, but when the people, who are the jury to decide the relative merits of the two tickets, rendered their verdict it was in favor of the Republicans by a large majority. The Democrats sacrificed their gubernatorial and legislative tickets for the Sheriff and in that way succeeded in electing Mr. Brown, but that sort of thing will not work twice in succession. Col. Farnham will be the next Sheriff of Penobscot County. The only charge that the Commercial can bring against him is that he was postmaster in this city for a number of years. So he was, and a mighty good one too, the standard of the office being much higher under his administration than it is to-day although Democratic reform has increased the force.

The Indiana Contest.

The recent Republican Convention in Indiana, the largest and most enthusiastic ever held in the State, shows that the Republicans are to conduct an aggressive campaign. Gen. Harrison's nomination naturally gave a great impetus to Republican enthusiasm, and the selection of Gen. Hovey meets with widespread satisfaction. There is universal enthusiasm among the Indiana Republicans in Washington over the nomination of General Hovey. At Indianapolis they say Hovey's selection was as good as would have been that of ex-Governor Porter; and that the State will go from five to ten thousand Republican beyond any doubt. Some of the Indiana Republicans in the House figure Harrison's majority in the State as high as 15,000. General Hovey has received a lot of telegrams from soldiers, to not only his own state, but others, assuring him of their support. He commanded 20,000 men at different times during the late war, about 30,000 of them being from Indiana and participated in upwards of 30 engagements. The soldiers in Indiana will organize for him.

Intelligent Workingmen in Favor of Protection

Horace B Thurber, the well known wholesale grocer and special partner of the firm of Thurber, Wyland & Co., of New York, says that those who do not come in contact with the wage earners of New York could have a faint conception only of the great number of voters who get their bread by the sweat of their brows who have come out for the election of Harrison and Morton, and who are every day making such announcements. "I am in a position to see these things daily as they occur," said Mr Thurber. "On the docks among the longshoremen, the teamsters, the truckmen, the men employed along West and South streets and in the other quarters also, I find a constantly increasing tendency to leave Cleveland and free trade and support Harrison and protection. The men who talk this way are sensible, thinking, reasoning men. They are the kind of men who work hard and supply a good living for their families. I do not say that every man I meet is for Harrison, but it is generally so with the more intelligent. Men who realize their superiority to the laborers of England, France, Germany and Austria, and who appreciate the advantages which their children enjoy here as compared with those of the working classes of Europe, are every day making the discovery that a vote for Cleveland is a vote for free trade, the overthrow of home enterprise and the destruction of home comforts."

What Protection Has Done.

Even free trade organs acknowledge that our prosperity has been unparalleled, but they tell us that with free trade we would have been more prosperous during the past twenty-five years. That, however, is mere assertion, and not argument.

When a farmer raises a great crop of potatoes from a field which never produced before, by reason of a superior fertilizer, and calls attention to it, and is met by the words: "Yes, but if you had planted nothing you would have had a larger crop of potatoes," that farmer would tell his theoretical friend to go to grass, and he would have to go. If free trade kept us in poverty as a nation for eighty-five years, off and on, is it not fair to presume—yes, is it not certain, that it would have accomplished like results by an additional orbit of only twenty-five years? Like produces like, and what you reap you have sowed. If you now free trade you reap poverty, and if you now high protection you reap prosperity.

Mr. Morton's Gift to Ireland.

(Special Telegram.)

The Tribune has received many inquiries from its readers relative to the part taken recently by persons in need, with contributions of food to Ireland, under the chartering of a vessel load by subscription of Congress, that at the Brooklyn Navy Yard awaiting a cargo, but that no consignee yet from Ireland. This question, which is personally known to us, was whether responsible parties can be safely induced that we assume to guarantee the performance of his offer, a guarantee which would be superfluous if he did not desire to conceal his name, proposed to pay for one-fourth of the cargo of the Constellation if other parties will make up the balance.

NEW YORK, March 9, 1880.

To the Editor of the Herald:

I learn from the secretary of the Navy that the ship Constellation, which he proposes to send with contributions of food to Ireland under the authority of both Houses of Congress, approved February 16, 1880, is at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, but that no tenders of cargo have been made. You are authorized to announce that a gentleman personally known to you, who declines to have his name made public, offers to pay for one-quarter of the cargo of the Constellation, if other parties will make up the balance. The capacity of the ship is equal to 2,500 barrels of flour, but her cargo should be made up of flour, or meal and seed potatoes, which last would arrive in time for planting, and replace those which the sufferers have been forced to use to sustain life. I shall desire the distribution of the cargo to be made by Mr. Bennett's committee. As you are aware, these articles of food will be delivered free of cost, save to the government. If you approve the idea you can make the proposition without (for the present at least) using my name. You may assume to guarantee the performance of my offer. Believe me,

Yours very truly,

A FRIEND.

On March 18 the Herald said editorially:

We congratulate the friends of suffering Ireland that the first cargo has been so promptly made up. The Constellation announced her readiness to receive freight on Tuesday next and on Wednesday her cargo will be on board. This is due in great part to the distinguished citizen who started the movement. There is no reason why we should any longer conceal his name. As his offer was conditional, and it was uncertain whether the condition would be complied with, he had a reluctance to use his name connected with an offer which he might not be called to fulfil. But now that the cargo is complete and the offer binding we take the liberty to state that the generous donor who infused new life into this movement is Hon. Levi P. Morton. If Mr Grace, who makes an equal contribution, falls behind Mr. Morton, it is only because he did not lead the way but followed instead of acting as inspiring example.

The Constellation sailed on March 27 and arrived at Dublin on April 20 after a stormy voyage, and was met by the Duke of Edinburgh.

The Duel of San Saligne.

By FORBES HEERMANS.

II.

Before sunrise the next morning the Don left the Horseshoe V 3 ranch. He had passed a sleepless night, thinking over what he had heard, and as he placed his left foot in the stirrup and mounted Rosinante, he swore a reverential oath that, come what might, Mirandy should be saved. It was true he had not been well treated either by the wilder or Mirandy, he told himself again, yes —love your obstacles—hold heap coals of fire on their heads and do them good for evil. That had been his principle in life ever since he reformed. Besides, what man of spirit and honor could see such an outrage committed and not interfere? Even if the girl were a stranger to him, he could not do less than shoot the villain and restore her to her weeping family. But when she was his heart's case—Mirandy! Rejoice, for the hour is at hand.

He pulled out his carbine from its holster under his leg to see if it was all right. And yet, wasn't shooting too good for a man who would wrest a woman as Bob Green was going to treat Mirandy? Shouldn't he be hanged? Then he examined the rawhide lasso that hung from his saddle horn, in painful doubt on this question.

He would intercept the party at the Montezuma crossing, he said himself, and show Bob Green that there was one man of honor and courage still left in San Miguel county. And he'd do the deed single handed, perhaps Mirandy would smile upon him a little for that—perhaps she'd—marry him. B'hold the bridegroom cometh—perhaps. His head grew dizzy at this thought, and he pushed his horse into a hard gallop and rode out of sight of the ranch.

When the sun rose that morning it lit up a perfect sea. Here and there on the rolling mesas stood a national cactus or spinole that split up the yellow light into long lanes that lay softly on the land. As the day grew older and the shadows shorter, one might have noticed a small, cumulus cloud in the west hanging close to the line where land and sky joined. This cloud grew larger and larger as it sailed up toward the south, and others followed it until the blue was hidden behind the grey. Then swift, zigzag streaks of gold darted from one part of the heavens to another and dull, rumbling peals of thunder followed the flashes. There was a coming storm in April—an extraordinary occurrence in New Mexico.

Down the road that skirted Los Tanos might have been seen two persons—a man and a mule—riding at full speed. The man sat bolt upright on his saddle—a perpendicular line from his shoulder would have touched his hip, his knee and his heel—and he stuck to the leather as if he had been tied there. Beside him galloped the woman, mounted upon a spirited chestnut mare which she rode on a side saddle. Upon her head she wore a huge white sombrero tied tightly under her chin and from beneath this her hair fell shaped and hung in masses down her back. Her riding habit was a long flowing skirt of some dark brown material and her left foot although concealed by her skirt carried a spur with which she now and then urged her steed onward. The man looked now and then angrily up at the sky, and turning to his companion said:

"I'll get a little more out of that mare, Mirandy! We must get across the Montezuma bog above the rain comes, if we want to get married this year. Least but to start there—it makes the mud too soft."

"I don't know I can do anything better," Bob said Mirandy "shall I'll try." She [illegible] the mustang again and again. To [illegible] of the steel the animal responded [illegible] sous jumps then settled back [illegible] ops.

"Keep on, Bob," she said. "I can't get [illegible] at this pace."

"Well we must take our chances then," said Bob. "We can't turn back now the wilder'll be after us in two hours with a posy."

Before them stretched the low flat expanse of bog-land extending to the right and left [illegible] miles. To look at, the surface of the bog appeared to be a hard crust baked [illegible] and covered with a white coating of alkali, through which grew no manner of living plant. So parched had the land become that it was split and seamed with [illegible] that yawned for moisture. Down through the middle of this desert flowed the sluggish stream that came from the Montezuma springs, a curious natural phenomenon that plied its water as bitter and heavy as that if the Dead sea, yet strange to say nourished a row of trees, willow and pine with here and there a scaly, narrow chaparral that grew along the edges of the rock. These trees were the only grain that for miles the land elsewhere presented, a fact, despite appearances.

Across the bog there was a faint path which could be traversed in the dry season but once let the crust become wet, and it turned to a slimy mud that yielded to the weight of a man or horse and gripped so tightly what it seized that self relief was impossible.

Just before the two riders reached the edge of the bog the storm which had been gathering all the morning suddenly burst upon them. Sharp flashes of lightning darted from one black cloud to another, and loud, rumbling thunder answered the flashes. Then came the rain. The mist barriedly sprang from his horse, and untying his "slicker" which he had carried tightly bound to his saddle, wrapped the huge yellow oil cloth most about the girl, and mounting again, pulled his sombrero down over his face.

"Wal we got to go on, Mirandy. No use stopping here. In half an hour the creek will be up so's we can't cross anyhow. How's your mare—skittish, least bit?"

"Wal you special when there's storm like this one."

"Wal I reckon I'd better clip a buckaroo over head an' lead her, then just give her a loose rein an' she'll go all right."

Thus they advanced across the bog. The rain poured down in sheets as it does in the tropics. The water soon obliterated the path and the dry earth greedily drank up the moisture. The ground grew softer and softer every moment. Twice Bob's horse sank to his knees and once the mare narrowly escaped. But at length they reached the stream that flowed through the marsh and gave it its name. It was perhaps fifty feet wide shallow, sluggish and evil looking with rocky banks that gave refuge to innumerable rattlesnakes and lizards. Pausing a moment on the edge to assure himself that his companion was all right Bob started to ride into the creek.

"Don't you follow me, Mirandy," he said "all I pull on ah' tug the bottom's nasty, long here special since this rain begun."

All this time the Don had been concealed in ambush a few yards off and dripped distconsolately in the rain which was falling. He had reached his present position with great difficulty. The trail across the bog was quite unknown to him and he had been obliged to dismount and lead his horse. The storm that followed had washed out his tracks and prevented those who came after from suspecting his presence. He was too far away to hear what Bob said to Mirandy, but he could see her and face—her eyes seemed big with tears—and her long, brown hair which hung down her back, mazing in wet masses on the yellow "slicker," gave her the look of some lovely martyr maiden in the grasp of a vicious giant. He burned to distinguish himself, to rescue helpless virginity from the power of the monster. Not only was here an innocent female being carried off by force, but she was his innocenta, Dulcinea del Tance whom he had so long worshiped, silently but faithfully.

He watched Bob ride into the stream, he saw his horse lifted off his feet and carried down by the flood current. He saw him recover a foothold again, then he heard Bob shout to Mirandy "Go back! go back!" and he realized that the horse was best in the bog, for Bob was riding sideways and left with his heavy riding whip, while the animal was churning the water into foam in his frantic efforts to escape.

Now was the Don's chance. There was the wished moment, helpless to harm his Dulcinea, while here was he, her savior, free and unhindered. Shouting Rosinante with his heel, he charged out from behind the chaparral and rode straight at Mirandy. She showed no emotion, he mentally viewed at his own resistance. He had stupidly put his hand into the lion's mouth—he had got the drop on him with a forty-five, at ten yards. A ridiculous combination, truly, for one who wished to appear well before Mirandy.

"What you reckoning?" Bob have hurt" asked Bob, shortly, and his gray eyes looked wicked as he snapped out his words. "Put yer hands up—put 'em up, I say!"

The Don reluctantly obeyed. It was a most humiliating position for a knight like himself to be placed in—just as he was about to rescue his Dulcinea—but what could he do? He was not afraid, he was simply yielding to circumstances. Bob's persuasive air and six shooter—when he raised his heels "Eighteen Tours," the firm advertises several longer excursions including two to Southern California, two direct over the Northern Pacific Railroad, the Pacific Northwest and California (one including also the Yellowstone National Park), and two to Cuba. Descriptive circulars of various tours may be obtained of W. Raymond, 296 Washington street, opposite School street, Boston, Mass.

Our readers have doubtless often noticed that Hood's Sarsaparilla is well spoken of in the newspapers. The press is quick to recognize merit, and does not hesitate to give praise when it is due. The following is from the Baptist Weekly, a leading religious paper:

"Advertising may bring an article prominently before the public, but no advertising can long help it if it has not real merit. Hood Sarsaparilla is well advertised, but the best proof of its value is that so many persons use it on the recommendations of friends who have proved its peculiar virtues."

No one knows better than those who have used Carter's Little Liver Pills what relief they have given when taken for dyspepsia, dizziness, pain in the side, constipation, and disordered stomach.

Do not despair of curing your sick headache when you can so easily obtain Carter's Little Liver Pills. They will effect a prompt and permanent cure. Their action is mild and natural.

But if she knew what wonderful cures Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has effected in worse cases than hers she would clutch at the chance of recovering lost health as drowning men catch at straws, and she might be saved.

To get relief from indigestion, biliousness, constipation or torpid liver without disturbing the stomach or purging the bowels, take a few doses of Carter's Little Liver Pills if they will please you.

If you don't want to disgust everybody with your offensive breath, cure your Catarrh upon which a dreaded $500 reward is offered by the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy for a case they cannot cure. All the torn Bob had been mounted on the mared horse in midstream, quite powerless to help himself or his animal. The Don rode to the edge of the bank and said:

"I'll take to check that over ya, Bob, and get ye outen that. Look out!" Bob nodded his acquiescence.

Very deftly the Don swung the loop about his head, opening it at each turn with a gen the movement of his wrist then, when it had acquired just the right momentum, let it slip from his hand. It went whirring and twirling through the air, and settled down over Bob's shoulders. Taking a turn of the free end about his saddle horn the Don backed Rosinante away from the stream and in another second Bob wet and muddy, stood by Mirandy's side. The Don did not say he halves, and when he saw Mirandy jump to the ground to greet her lover, he discreetly turned his head aside and endeavored, though ineffectually, not to hear the sounding smack that followed. That little matter over once more he swung his lasso, and once more it shot audibly through the air. This time the open loop dropped over the head of the horse. Now the Don had his hands full, the animal reared, and struggled and snorted but the effort of the strong, manly pull was apparent in time, and at last the horse stood upon the bank—meekly trembling and weak
